Closing date: Monday 5th October 2020

£3000 plus £1000 allowance for production, travel and accommodation

Brief and Application Guidance

Grizedale Forest & Signal Film and Media, with Art Fund support, are seeking a socially engaged digital artist (or collaborative partnership of artists and developers) to create a new, online participatory artwork responding to Grizedale Forest in Cumbria in the North West of England.

The commissioned artist will work alongside a local BAME/BIPOC community group to increase engagement with the forest and digital art for this underrepresented audience/visitor group. The project will provide new learning and testing of innovative working practices aimed at helping develop artwork beyond the physical forest so that more people, from more backgrounds, can engage with art inspired by the forest.

The Brief

Grizedale Forest welcomes just over 200 thousand visitors a year to enjoy a range of activities from exploring site specific sculpture in the landscape, contemporary exhibitions in the forest centre's gallery through to walking, cycling and go ape activities. Our surveys show that they fall short of being representative of the population in their visitor demographics particularly with BAME groups which only form 1% of our visitors. Forestry England manages these forests on behalf of the public and wants to understand and address barriers of access to the nation's public forests. We believe the arts have a vital role to help people connect with nature and for us to build connections with communities.

Since 1974 artists have created work in the landscape at Grizedale taking inspiration from this working forest, learning from foresters, ecologists, wildlife rangers and recreation rangers which has seen artists such as Andy Goldsworthy, David Nash, Richard Harris and Sally Matthews amongst others develop their practice as emerging artists in this very special of places. The outdoor sculpture collection stands at 50 sculptures spread out over 24km² of managed forest landscape in Cumbria. This is a unique history and environment for arts audiences and non-arts audiences to engage with art and landscape and this project will push our commissioning practice into new and innovative areas.

Theme

During lockdown the forest continued to grow, wildlife became more abundant and changed its behaviour, people formed a new sense of value for access to outdoor space and nature and the freedom to explore.

The Digital Forest will capture a truly unique moment in time as visitors slowly return to the forest and once again become reconnected with nature. This project has been designed so that underrepresented groups are very much part of that reconnection as we open up the forest to become the gallery, studio and playground for all as new relationships are formed through digital media and creativity.

Aims of the commission:

- Develop a new and innovative online digital artwork and engagement model inspired by the forest, that connects with underrepresented audiences
- Enhance organisational understanding and future potential for breaking down barriers to engagement by BAME/BIPOC representatives
- Create an opportunity for an artist (or artists) to reflect and create work in the context of nature and post lockdown attitudes to public space and engagement with the natural environment

The artist(s) is required to:

- Work closely with Signal Film & Media and Grizedale Forest staff to deliver a digital artwork to be presented online.
- Work in participation with a local BAME/BIPOC community group in creating the artwork.
- We ask the artist to deliver a talk (potentially online) and a workshop for the local community (this is alongside and additional to the artist led sessions/research with the BAME/BIPOC community group during the commission).

We can offer the artist:

- An Artist fee of £3000 plus accommodation, travel and production fee of £1000
- Studio/work space
- Curatorial, practical and technical support throughout the residency
- Wide Publicity and Marketing with associated public events
- Online Exhibition on Forestry Commission Website

We welcome applications from artists working in any discipline, and/or with a cross-disciplinary practice but we expect artists to have a commitment to, and track record in, using digital media and the online/virtual space in their practice, as well as experience of, and the passion for, working in a socially engaged and /or participatory way.

We welcome artists with an interest in how sharing online, using virtual space and working collaboratively can inform the development of their work.

Applications are always actively encouraged from all artists from all backgrounds and we actively encourage artists to apply who belong to one or more of the following groups: Black, Asian or from a minority ethnic group (a person of colour), refugee, D/deaf, disabled, neurodivergent, working class and LGBTQI+.
