Brief and Application Guidance

Signal Film and Media are accepting proposals for creative projects from a socially-engaged, multidisciplinary artist who will work collaboratively with young people from ages 14 - 30 to produce a new artistic commission that responds to The Sankey Family Photographic Archive.

The Sankey Photographic Archive is a stunning collection of over 10,000 glass plate negatives and postcards of Barrow and the north-west, which were produced and shared around the world from 1895 to the 1970s.

We welcome applications from a multidisciplinary artist who has experience of, and the passion for, working in a socially engaged and /or participatory way. We welcome artists with an interest in archival photography and working collaboratively with a diverse range of young local people to form an exciting artistic exhibition.

Applications are encouraged from artists from all backgrounds and we actively encourage artists to apply who belong to one or more of the following groups: Black, Asian or from a Minority Ethnic group, Refugee, D/deaf, Disabled, Neurodivergent, Working Class and LGBTQI+

This project is funded by the National Lottery Heritage Fund to use digital media and creative interpretation to explore the Sankey Photography Archive and make it accessible to a diverse range of people.

The Brief

Signal Film & Media

Signal Film and Media (SFM) is an Award winning heritage and digital arts charity dedicated to providing inclusive, high quality digital media and cultural experiences. We believe in the power of creativity as a driver for social change and have a deep commitment to our vision of 'A Cultural Community where Talent is Nurtured and People Thrive'. Based in Barrow-in-Furness, Cumbria, we offer an outstanding, year-round programme of inspirational heritage and digital arts learning opportunities, which support people at the margins of our community to reach their potential.

THE SANKEYS were a father and sons who documented life in Barrow and Cumbria over 70 years. Starting in 1900, they captured the landscape, cultural changes, individuals, industry and tourism (plus much more). The postcards they created from their photography were posted all over the world and tell fascinating stories of the 20th century. Since 2019, we have successfully re-housed, re-packaged and digitised the full collection in collaboration with the Sankey Family and Cumbria Archives.

We are now working with local people and partner organisations to bring the archive to life through research and creative workshops.

As part of our work we want to commission a socially-engaged artist or collective to work with the young people from the local community to explore the archive through creative workshops and activities to produce artwork to bring the archive to new audiences.

Theme

The Sankey Photographic Collection was created by father and sons Edward, Raymond and Eric Sankey in Barrow-in-Furness, and Cumbria more widely from 1900 to the early 1970's. The main use of the Sankey negatives were as printed postcards which were produced using a special printing machine developed by Edward Sankey. During peak production the Sankey family were producing 100,000 postcards per year. The postcards were sold throughout Cumbria and the messages on the back paint a picture of a by-gone day, offering small glimpses into the lives of people who were living in and visiting Barrow and locations in Cumbria.

The Sankey family were pioneers in documenting the huge shifts in the social, economic and physical landscapes of the area. They photographed a wide range of events including royal visits, the launch of ships from Barrow's shipyards, the steam ships, glimpses inside the factories, airships, Barrow shop fronts, street scenes, railways, picturesque scenes of the Lake District and portraits of local dignitaries and ordinary working people alike.

The commissioned artist will work alongside young people to increase engagement with the archival collection through contemporary art. The artwork and the associated workshops, talks and masterclasses should engage and connect more young people, from more diverse backgrounds and marginalised areas.

Aims of the commission:

- Appoint a multidisciplinary artist to explore the collection and develop high quality collaborative artworks with the young people from the local community, inspired by the Sankey Photographic Archive, to be exhibited to a wider audience.

- To run a series of in depth workshops/talks/masterclasses to a diverse range of young local people.
- To present a talk at a Preview night on the 8th August 2024 (TBC)

We expect the project to include:

- Research and development with the collection and in the local area
- A chance for the public to meet the artist and hear all about the project and the collection
- Development of an artwork (individually and as a group)
- Final artwork(s) produced interpreting the findings, for an exhibition and to be presented

The artist(s) is required to:

- Work closely with Signal Film & Media to deliver the project and final high quality artworks).
- Work in participation with local individuals in creating the artwork.
- We ask the artist to deliver a series of workshops or masterclasses for the young people in the local community.
- The artist will adhere to Signal's safeguarding policies and procedures

We can offer the artist:

- A fee of £8,000 (to include artist fees, workshop delivery, artists own materials/production and final exhibition costs). A further budget will be available for staging and output production.
- Studio/work space
- Curatorial, practical and technical support throughout the residency
- Wide Publicity and Marketing with associated public events
- Gallery and Online Exhibition
- Signal will arrange the publicity and recruitment of all workshops and spaces and is able to supply a range of digital camera equipment and editing software.
- Accommodation and Travel
